POLITICAL POINTS.

The Campaign in Indiana Becomes Exceeding Lively.

BLAINE VISITED BY GERMANS

The New York Democracy Political Straws from the "Sun" A Description of Belva Lockwood Etc

LOGANSPORT, Ind, Oct 21 —Mr Blaine left Fort Wayne at a quarter before 9 this morning for Indianapolis and intervening points. In the party accompanying him were Senator Harrison, Hon Wm McKinley of Ohio and John C New. At Huntington there was a very large crowd who cheered Mr Blaine heartily when he appeared on the rear platform. He spoke briefly, urging the great importance to Indiana of having the protective policy continued. At Wabash he left the train and was driven to the platform from which he made another brief speech to the sale exim meeting, here also a very large and enthusiastic crowd of people

AT INDIANAPOLIS

INDIANAPOLIS, Oct. 21.—At Peru, Logansport, Kokomo, Tipton and Noblesville there were very large crowds, probably averaging 10,000 each, and Blaine was everywhere received with the most enthusiastic demonstration. At each place he spoke briefly upon the great importance to Indiana and to other states that are developing manufactures of maintaining the protective tariff. It was about 4 o'clock when the train arrived at Indianapolis. The demonstration here, if not the greatest that has yet been made on Blaine's western tour, has certainly not been excelled by any other in magnitude or enthusiasm. Immediately upon leaving the train Blaine entered a carriage with Governor Porter and was driven in a procession, escorted by a large body of Plumed Knights, through Washington street, the principal street of Indianapolis, entirely across the city to the military park on one side. Along the entire route nearly every building was gaily decorated

Arrived at the park, Blaine ascended the stand, from which he faced a great multitude, and thereupon, being introduced by Governor Porter, he spoke as follows

BLAINE'S SPEECH

Friends and Fellow Citizens—I feel that such a magnificent reception as I have had to-day in the capital of Indiana is complete in itself, that speech cannot add to its effect, and that I should content myself with offering you, as I do, my profound and heartfelt thanks ("Go on," and cheers.) In no state of the union, in no city of the union, could such a reception and such a welcome be more significant in itself, or more grateful to me personally. (Great cheering.) We stand on the eve of an important national election, an election in whose decision Indiana will have a potential voice ("We'll settle it") She is looked to by our opponents, as she has been in former years, as an ally of the solid south, against her sister states of the north ("Never.") Since the election in West Virginia the democratic party count upon a solid vote in the south, and I may be permitted to express the opinion that no more unpatriotic thing can be done than for northern men to urge continued isolation based on memories of the rebellion (Great cheering.) It has been the aim and desire of the republican party to develop the interests of the south, and to make her people forget, and the nation forget, that we have ever been foes, remembering only that we are citizens of a common union, under a common constitution, looking to a common destiny. (Cheers.) But our opponents meet us in an entirely different course of action. Instead of memories of the union they invoke prejudices of the rebellion in their aid, and they ask that New York and Indiana shall join the unholy alliance, and turn the national government over to the south ("Never, never!") I do not believe Indiana will do that under its present leadership, any more than it would have done the same thing under the leadership of Oliver P. Morton, the badge of whose memorial club I am proud to wear (placing his hand on his breast, enthusiastic cheering.)

WHAT DEMOCRATIC VICTORY MEANS

The triumph of the northern sentiment in the democratic party clearly means free trade. It means the breaking down of the great industrial system which has enriched the United States so marvelously in the last twenty-three years, and which has enriched your own state in an equal degree with other states. Indiana has grown into a superb commonwealth, great in her population, great in her enterprise, great in wealth. Not even known beyond her borders as a manufacturing state when the republican party came into power in 1861, she now turns out in a single year $150,-100,000 worth of manufactured products (Cheers.) The development, therefore, of your manufacturing resources dependent as it is upon the protective tariff, is of the highest interest to every citizen of the state. A community that combines agriculture and manufactures has the necessary conditions for attaining an ideal prosperity. I can remember myself, and I am not an old man, the time when in my native state of Pennsylvania Governor Ritner was laughed at for saying that the day would come when Pennsylvania would not be able to supply breadstuffs and provisions to the miners in her mountains and the factories in her towns, yet that day came long ago, and Pennsylvania, the first wheat state in the Union as late as 1850, depends to-day for a large share of her breadstuffs upon the granaries of the west. (Cheers.)

INDIANA TO DECIDE

When Indiana shall have developed her manufacturing enterprise to such a degree as to be able to consume her own agricultural products she will have attained an ideal prosperity, and she can do that only by means of the protective tariff. (Renewed cheering.) The issue is in your hands. You are free men. You have a free ballot, but in the south we have a million of friends who have not a free ballot. The south to-day has thirty-seven electoral votes, based upon the vote of the colored men, yet the colored men of the south, though a million in number, can not choose a single presidential elector ("That's so.") As a result of that the political power of the white man in the south is enormously increased beyond that of the white man in Indiana, or in Maine. For the time being we will not argue at all the question of negro suffrage, but I submit, as a fair proposition, to every man in the land, that if the south is to have thirty-seven presidential electors by reason of the negro vote, then the negro himself ought to be allowed to cast his ballot ("That's it," and cheers.)

The issue is in your hands. Indiana, as I said when I began, will have a potential voice in the decision, and from the popular demonstrations I have witnessed since I crossed the border of your state I feel, I know, indeed I am sure, that upon the ground of patriotism and upon the ground of enlightened self-interest, Indiana may be relied upon to maintain the protective tariff, and to sustain, as an assurance thereto, the republican party. (Great and prolonged cheering.)

AN ADDRESS BY GERMANS

From the park Blaine was driven to the residence of Senator Harrison, where he dined in company with several gentlemen invited to meet him. After dinner a deputation of German-American citizens called upon him and presented the following address

Hon James G. Blaine: The German-American republican organization of Indianapolis have delegated the undersigned to express to you their confidence and esteem. The identity of your public life with the rise and progress of our country and our party, and the eminent services you have rendered to both, are matters of history, and make our duty pleasant as it is honorable. Your election to the presidency will honor our country and our party. Inspired by a love of liberty and free government, we left the land of our fathers to find a new home in this republic, and looking toward the welfare of the nation, we have no other interests other than American citizens. Looking over the pages of history, we find the republican party to have been the party of liberty and progress, and we trust it to be the same in the future. Upon those pages we find your name and that of the gallant General Logan inscribed with golden letters, and we feel that, as heretofore, so you will, in the future, do honor to the country. Please accept this document as a token of our appreciation and indorsement of your life character and public services. We welcome you to the capital of our great state

BLAINE'S REPLY

Mr Blaine replied as follows: "Gentlemen, I am grateful for your call. I am grateful to your friendly spirit. I am grateful for your expressions of good will. This assurance of German sympathy and German support in Indiana is a repetition of what I received in Ohio. My birth and my rearing were in a state that made me familiar from childhood with the German character—its steadiness, its industry, its fidelity, its integrity, its truth, friendship and loyalty to the government. Pennsylvania owes much to her German population—to the Muhlenbergs, to the Hiesters, to the Wolfs, to the Shunks, who have illustrated her annals, and with whom I am not unconnected by ties of friendship, of inherited association and in some cases of kindred blood. When I reached Ohio I sought a conference with German friends, and was assured, and subsequent events have confirmed the assurance, that so far from being hostile to me, personally, my German fellow-citizens were, as I had a right to expect and as you so eloquently declare, partial to me. Thanking you again, gentlemen, for the cordial expressions of your address, I am proud to take each one of you by the hand in token of mutual friendship and esteem."

A DELEGATION OF MINISTERS

Later a large delegation of ministers, about twenty in number, called upon Mr. Blaine and presented an address as follows

To James G. Blaine—Dear Sir: As Christian ministers, we extend to you, irrespective of party considerations, a cordial welcome to our city, and we bid you heartily good speed. It seems fitting, now that you are in the city from which, for no other than partisan reasons, poisoned arrows have been shot at you, that we should at least refer to that fact, but let us assure you that the Christian people of this vicinity have no sympathy with any such modes of warfare. We therefore bring to you this word of good cheer, and further, we beg leave to say that we recognize in you a fellow citizen justly honored, an experienced statesman, a patriotic leader, a steadfast friend of both the laborer and the oppressed, in short, a typical American, and, as we trust, the coming president of the United States.

To this Blaine replied: "I return you my sincere thanks, gentlemen, for your friendly call. I know the influence you wield, deservedly, in the community in which your lives illustrate the teachings you enforce. Although we do not have in this country a union of church and state, yet I recognize the great influence which the Christian ministry fairly and properly exercises in forming just public opinion, and I cannot in words too warm express the gratitude I feel for your cordial assurance of esteem and support."

To-morrow Blaine will go to Evansville, stopping at several places on the way

A SPECIAL REPORT.

Indiana Wild with Excitement Over the Campaign—A Democratic Trick

NEW YORK, Oct 21.—[Special.]—A Fort Wayne, Indiana, special, dated the 9th, says: "The republicans and the democrats have rival parades to-night. Trains have brought people from as far as Toledo, Ohio. The streets are alive, and every third man has a fish horn, industriously blowing to drown the noise of his rival. The maddest scenes in Ohio pale before the confusion of this evening at Fort Wayne. If the night should pass without a free fight between the marching companies it will be a wonder."

The Sun's special from Fort Wayne, Indiana, says: "Blaine was howled down by a democratic crowd in this town this afternoon, and denied the privilege of speaking in the place assigned him by the republican local committee. This seems to be the result of the plan devised by the democrats to offset the effect of Blaine's visit. The county is strongly democratic with a majority easily of 4000. Ten days ago the republicans prepared for Blaine's appearance. It was arranged that he should speak from the balcony of the Aveline house. Opposite this hotel is the open court house square. Two days ago the democrats got up an opposition meeting, to be held at the same time as the one advertised for Blaine, and they selected a spot forty feet distant from the Aveline house balcony. The democrats advertised their meeting to be addressed by Hendricks and Senator Bayard, but they did not their names were merely used to draw a crowd. Blaine was wholly uninformed of the situation

A LOSING TRICK

When Blaine entered the city he found the place wonderfully crowded. Twenty-five thousand persons were in the streets and along the line of march. The carriages of the party were driven two miles through cheering crowds to the hotel where Blaine was to speak. When he came out on the balcony there were in front of him at least 1000 democrats. They had taken their position in advance of the arrival of the republicans, and were therefore masters of the situation. Blaine began to speak, when his appearance was greeted by a storm of yells and groans. He waited ten minutes, during which he essayed to speak four times, and each time he was yelled down. Then he consulted with the local committeemen. Blaine was very indignant at being placed opposite the democratic meeting, but it was too late to mend this.

"Well, let us see," said Blaine, "to whom the crowd belongs." He entered a carriage and was driven to an open space, eight blocks away. He was followed by a great majority of the crowd, not more than 1200 remaining round the democratic stand. Blaine stood upon the coachman's box and made a speech which was heard by 15,000. The excitement of the scene at the hotel had spurred him up so that he made one of the most spirited speeches of the canvass. He was received with a storm of cheers

INTENSE EXCITEMENT PREVAILS

His reception at Fort Wayne would have been the most brilliant of the day if it had not been for the hotel episode. Along the line of his journey from South Bend he had exceptionally large and enthusiastic crowds. At Elkhart he addressed 8000, at Goshen 6000, at Ligonier and Kendallville the same number, and at Auburn, his last stop, 10,000. In his talk to-day Blaine asked if they wanted to have the solid, free-trade south secure the votes of New York and Indiana, so as to bring into power the section which had sought to destroy the government.

The best proof that this state has gone crazy upon the election is the fact that at all stops to-day there were long lines of young women, wearing campaign uniforms, marching with torches over their shoulders with the men. In some places, as at Kendallville, the young women were the beauties of the place. The general uniform is a white duck dress, trimmed and slashed with scarlet, with bands of red across the breast. The cap is jaunty and of red silk. These young women march and sing while their brothers shout. The city of Fort Wayne appears to have gone absolutely mad

PENSION COMMISSIONER DUDLEY.

Exonerated from the Charge of Giving Preference to Applicants from Ohio and Indiana.

WASHINGTON, Oct 21.—Some ten days ago Everett P. Wheeler, counsel for the Civil Service Reform Association of New York, sent a communication to President Arthur, stating that Colonel Dudley, commissioner of pensions, was absent from his post and conducting the canvass of the republican party in Ohio, to the entire neglect of his official duties, and, furthermore, that he had given orders that applications for pensions filed by voters residing in Ohio and Indiana be taken up out of the order of filing, and have preference in their examination over those filed by persons residing in many other states

The president referred the letter to the acting secretary of the interior, who in turn sent it to O. P. G. Clark, acting commissioner of pensions, who to-day made a report, in which, after recapitulating the subject matter of the charges, he says: "I will state, briefly, that Commissioner Dudley left this city on or about September 3 last, when the duties of the office devolved upon me. On or about September 30 Colonel Dudley returned to the city, and while here handed you his resignation as commissioner of pensions, the same to take effect November 10 next. He again left the city and returned on the 16th instant. During the absence of the commissioner of pensions no precedence of action has been given in pension cases to those residing either in Ohio or Indiana, or in fact for any purpose within the scope of Mr. Wheeler's statement; nor have I received from Colonel Dudley, either before his departure from the city or during his absence, any orders or instructions relating to this subject. I am not aware, nor do I have any reason to believe, that any special instructions to any subordinates of the office had been given by the commissioner of pensions, with a view to secure such partial action. Discrimination in the settlement of pension claims for the purposes referred to by Mr. Wheeler, to the detriment of others equally deserving, would be so criminally unjust that I may be pardoned in emphasizing my denial so far as my action or knowledge goes, that any such favoritism has been shown, even, I may add, by indirection."

THE NEW YORK DEMOCRACY

NEW YORK, Oct 21.—At a meeting of the conference committee of the county democracy and the committees of other organizations the following county ticket was agreed upon, and will be submitted to the county democracy convention, to be held this afternoon: Mayor, William R. Grace; comptroller, Herman Oelrichs; president of the board of aldermen, R. Mooney; district attorney, Randolph B. Martine; coroner, General Franz Sigel; judges of the court of common pleas, Henry Wilder Allen, F. Ellery Anderson and William A. Boyd. It is rumored that Alderman Grant, Tammany nominee for mayor, will withdraw in favor of Mayor Edson

NEW YORK, Oct 21.—The county democracy to-day made the following nominations: Mayor, William R. Grace; comptroller, Edward D. Loewe; district attorney, Randolph B. Martine; president of the board of aldermen, Adolph L. Sanger; coroner, Dr. Louis W. Schultze; judges of the court of common pleas, Henry Wilder Allen, Edward Patterson and Alfred Wagstaff

STRAWS FROM THE "SUN"

NEW YORK, Oct 21.—[Special.]—Among the Sun's political straws are the following: An Irish American Blaine and Logan club of Yonkers tried to hold a mass meeting there yesterday evening, but was prevented by a crowd of hoodlums, who surrounded the stand, insulted the speakers and came very near producing a riot.

John Roach's iron works employ 1200 men. William Gaynor, foreman of the foundry, said yesterday: "I am a democrat, and always have been, but if you want to know for whom I am going to vote, that's another thing. You'll find plenty like me in the works. Some of them are for Blaine, and many for Butler. Out of 150 in the foundry at least 10 of them are for Butler. Opposition to free trade pervades the whole body of workmen."

A Sun editorial says: "There is no stalwart disaffection perceptible in this state, and if not among the stalwarts, where is the republican revolt which is going to make up for the great democratic schism?"

BELVA LOCKWOOD

NEW YORK, Oct 21.—[Special.]—The Tribune describes Belva Lockwood, who spoke Sunday night at the Academy of Music, as of medium size, wearing eye-glasses, dressed in black velvet, with a bunch of roses in her corsage, and her hair dayan [illegible] fashion. She stepped briskly on the stage, and when a number of women in the front rows clapped their hands Mrs. Lockwood bowed, but did not smile, and without looking at the roll of manuscript in her hand commenced her speech in a clear, musical voice. About 800 people were present. Admission tickets were [illegible] cents and $1

A PROTEST

NEW YORK, Oct 21.—[Special.]—The Sun says: "The order of Major [illegible] commanding the first division of the National Guards in this state, to parade on the 28th for review by the governor has raised a breeze of opposition among the rank and file of the division, who assert that the parade is simply an effort to use the division to advance Cleveland's interests. It will fail. There is the biggest kind of a kick. Half of the Twenty-third regiment is indulging in language which Cleveland men call mutinous."

"REFORM IS NECESSARY"

NEW YORK, Oct 21.—[Special.]—W. H. Webb in a statement this morning which shows that under democratic rule the debt of this city has increased until now it is $31 48 for every man, woman and child. Webb says: "It is probably the largest per capita expense for governmental purposes ever known in the history of the world"

CLEVELAND'S ASSAILANT

ALBANY, Oct 21.—Samuel Boone, Governor Cleveland's assailant, was interviewed to-day. He says he is a member of a Catholic family, and a thorough prohibitionist. Justice Gutman to-day appointed Doctors Van Dever and O'Leary to examine Boone as to his sanity

BUTLER'S MOVEMENTS

BINGHAMPTON, N. Y., Oct 21.—As General Butler was about to step on the train for Boston he got a telegram recalling him to New York

Particulars of the Great Fire at Carthage, N. Y.

THE LOSSES AGGREGATE $500,000

More About the O. R. & N. and the Oregon Short Line. A Woman Lynched in the South—General News

WATERTOWN, Oct 21.—The Carthage fire was the most disastrous that ever visited this part of the state. It began in a row of manufacturing buildings on the west side of the Black river. A heavy wind blew sparks half a mile across the river to two islands filled with manufacturing institutions. The flames burnt everything on the islands, and struck into the residence part of town and swept buildings from about seventy-five acres. This was the oldest part of town, and contained beautiful shade trees with fine dwellings. To-day this territory is a mass of smouldering ruins. One hundred and six dwellings were burned, besides manufacturing institutions, and the Episcopal, Presbyterian, Baptist and Disciples' churches, and the town hall, academy, and all other school buildings. The fire spread so rapidly that very little household goods could be saved. The fire departments of Watertown, Lowville, Boonville and [illegible] responded to the call for help, but as the fire would appear in a dozen different places at the same time, the streams from the engines were of little avail. The yards were filled with dry leaves, which ignited by flying cinders and fanned by a stiff breeze were soon in a blaze. There were 150 dwelling houses on fire at the same time. People worked hard for several hours to save their property, and then became panic stricken. All last night hundreds of them were roaming the streets or lying in spots where fire had not touched, every place of shelter in the village being filled with women and children. A large number of people were brought to this city, where they had friends to care for them.

It is impossible correctly to picture the scenes of yesterday afternoon and last night. Strong men were weeping and women and children crying as they realized that everything they possessed was being swept away. People who are thrown out of employment with everything they had destroyed will have to suffer unless assistance is rendered

No one was burned to death, but a score of people were badly burned, including firemen. The loss will foot up over a half million dollars. Insurance can not now be given, but agents say it will not reach one-third that amount

GENERAL NEWS.

A GOOD PLAN

ST. LOUIS, Oct. 21.—Steps are being taken by interested parties here to induce the national wool growers' association and the national farmers' convention to hold their annual meetings here at the same time of the great cattle convention, to be held next month. It is stated that the tanners are especially interested in reforming the system of branding cattle, as the one now in use greatly impairs the value of hides, and it is thought if the two interests can be brought together some plan can be devised to protect hides from the deep scars now made by branding irons and the tearing by barbed wire.

CRIMINAL CALENDAR

A FIEND'S CRIME

CAIRO, Ill., Oct. 21.—A passenger just in reports a frightful occurrence on the Paducah and Memphis train Sunday night. Herman Marshall of Dyersburg, Tenn., was on the train, drunk, and went up and down the aisles with a knife in hand, threatening everybody and indulging in the most frightful obscenity. Finally he insulted a man named Boone Hudspeth of Maysville, Ky., who struck him. Marshall cut and slashed Hudspeth's head, face and shoulders in a sickening manner, and the latter finally turned and ran out upon the platform, where Marshall followed and plunging his knife into the man's bowels, threw the bleeding man from the train as it passed over a bridge, the victim falling fifteen feet. The train backed up, and he was taken up, barely alive. Marshall continued his promenade through the cars, daring anyone to touch him, and no one dared. He was arrested

MAN AND WOMAN LYNCHED

CHATTANOOGA, Oct. 21.—A special to the Times from Centre, Alabama, says: A mob last night hanged J. P. Adjutant General King was yesterday ordered to go to Fort Worth and see that the warrant was enforced, and if necessary, to use the entire military force of the state. When the governor learned that Courtright had escaped he telegraphed to King to investigate the manner of the escape and to discover whether the state rangers having Courtright in charge are in the least responsible for his escape

ARRESTED ON SUSPICION

BOSTON, Oct. 21.—A dispatch from Albany states that Henry A. Hogeboom, the farmhand who claims to have discovered the obstruction on the track which wrecked the Boston and Albany train at Kinderhook Friday night, has been arrested on suspicion. RAILROAD NOTES

AREN'T WILLARD'S SLEEPERS

PHILADELPHIA, Oct 21.—Special. The Press prints correspondence between Cyrus W. Field and Horace White, editor of the New York Evening Post, in which Mr. Field shows how closely identified are the Evening Post and the Oregon Railway and Navigation conspiracy. In one case parties manage both Villard and White as financial conspirators in one case, and White and Villard newspaper operators in the other. Field wants to know how the company so largely watered its stock, how, in order to make its transactions, it charged itself excessive prices for transporting its own materials, by what right the treasurer loaned money of the company to its president without authority and without security. Field says: "The history of the Oregon Railway and Navigation company has never been fully written. In a recent visit to the Pacific coast I found materials for such history, rich and abundant. Perhaps some day they will be given to the world."

THE OREGON SHORT LINE

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 21.—[Special.]—The Press' New York special says: "Private advices from Oregon corroborate Vice President Oakes' statement that connection between the Oregon Railway and Navigation company and the Oregon Short Line will not be made for one month at the earliest. Trains will not be running before December. The earnings of the Oregon Railway and Navigation company for September are reported within $10,000 of the largest ever made by the company."

NOTABLE DEAD

FUNERAL OF WORMLEY

WASHINGTON, Oct. 21.—The funeral of Mr. Wormley, the famous hotel keeper, was one of the most remarkable tributes of respect ever paid to a colored man in this country. An immense crowd of friends and admirers of the dead man were assembled in the hotel and the streets around were so thronged that the police had difficulty in keeping the way clear for carriages. Services were conducted in the saloon parlors of the hotel, which were draped in dark and decorated with many floral offerings. The officiating clergymen were Revs Drs Sunderland, Grimke and Waring, and the pallbearers, sixteen in number, were selected from among the most prominent white and colored citizens of the district

Quite an excitement is occasioned on our streets this morning by the refusal of Mr. T. G. Hendricks to allow the street commissioner to raise the sidewalk in front of the store building owned by him and occupied by Matlock Bros., to the level of the new street grade. Raising the walk the required height (about six inches) would bring it above the level of the floor of the store building. If the matter is decided against Mr. Hendricks, as it probably finally will be, it will necessitate raising his building

To-day N. J. Brittan filed complaint in the superior court of this city against the Oakland Bank of Savings, A. W. Bowman and the Bank of California, which sets forth that plaintiff is owner of 120 shares of Bank of California stock, valued at $19,800, which stock Bowman deposited in said Oakland bank, receiving in lieu thereof a certificate from the Oakland bank. The court is asked to decree that plaintiff is owner of said Bank of California stock and that the Oakland bank surrender the same, or $19,-800, the value thereof.

Arthur W. Bowman, the capitalist and real estate agent, whose failure and arrest has created so much comment, was to-day admitted to bail by Judge Wilson, with Samuel C. Bigelow, W. A. Aldrich, John S. Spring and Albert Miller as sureties, with a bond of $10,000, filed by each

CHINESE CHILDREN AND THE PUBLIC SCHOOLS.

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 21.—A test case was made to-day, at the instigation of Colonel Bee, Chinese consul, for the admission of a Chinese girl, born in this state, into the public schools. The child's father has lived in California twenty years, and has adopted, in dress and other particulars, American habits. Her mother came here when a child and was educated by the ladies of the Protective union. They were married by a Protestant minister and have brought up the child in American ways. The existing laws prohibit the admission of Chinese children to public schools. The case was considered by the board of education, at a meeting this evening. State Superintendent Welcker said the child could not be admitted, as it would be contrary to law. The board then passed a resolution approving the existing law, and ordering instructions issued to all principals and teachers in public schools, prohibiting them from admitting Chinese children on pain of instant dismissal. The resolution was carried, nine to two, one member being absent

THE CORONERSHIP.

Blatherskite O'Donnell Declares Himself a Candidate and Prints a Platform.

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 21.—[Special.]—Dr. O'Donnell's candidacy for the coronership has become one of the humors of the local campaign. He prints in the Post this evening his declaration of principles, which, for originality, has probably never been surpassed in the history of platforms. It consists of twenty or more "planks," and almost every one is a dig at some special corrupt practice of his opponents, both of whom have held the office before. He says: "If I am elected coroner, and a freeman kills one of the bosses or one of their henchmen, and the case is brought before me, I will do all I can to bring in a verdict of justifiable homicide. I will not divide my salary, my perquisites, my fees or my stealings with Doctor William May. I will not vaccinate Chinamen with mucilage, nor blackmail the consignee of a steam tramp that may come to our harbor. I will not use the bodies of drowned persons the second, third or fourth time for the purpose of holding fraudulent coroner's inquests, in order to increase my illegal fees. I will not bury paupers in old shoe boxes in the potter's field, and steal the boxes from the potter's field to bury other paupers. I will not sell the clothes of persons who die from infectious diseases to second-hand clothing dealers to be sold again to the poor. I will not unnecessarily withhold from their friends the bodies of those accidentally killed. I will not unnecessarily oppose them at the morgue. I will not blackmail their relatives. I will not enter into a conspiracy with any undertaker, nor will I interfere or attempt to influence friends of deceased persons from employing such undertaker and from making such distribution of their dead as they may wish.

MORE PLEDGES

I will not prostitute my office to serve criminal rich men, when death comes to their victims and exposes their crimes. I will not, for coin, sell myself to cover suicide nor by perjury and subornation of perjury endeavor to hide iniquity. I will not rob the poor nor blackmail the rich. I will not subject the taxpayers of this city to the expense of lepers' hospitals, because there will be no lepers left after I have subjected them to an experiment of fumigation with oxalic acid and asphyxiation, which is a certain remedy for the disease, if applied as soon as the patient arrives in the county. I will not rob the dead, and I will not have a set of deputies about the office who will steal watches, jewelry and money of deceased persons. In the administration of my office as coroner, I will respect the feelings of the living. I will respect the remains of the dead, and I will be honest. I will do my duty. I will not be a tool to the bosses of party politicians."

This platform is, of course, much laughed at, but it is admitted that the administration of the coroner's office has been such that the virtuous course outlined would involve a radical change. Of the many nasty corruptions in San Francisco's local government, that of coroner's office has always been the nastiest. O'Donnell is a blatherskite of the worst kind, of course, but he will probably be elected

THE METHODS OF PROHIBITION.

Rev Dr Eliot of this city, in his sermon published yesterday, encourages prohibitionists to vote for St John, holding that it will be an aid to the cause for its representatives "to stand up to be counted." But the great body of prohibitionists do not see their duty at this time in the course which Dr Eliot advises Most of them, a majority certainly, are republicans and the address of the New York State Temperance Association, published by THE OREGONIAN yesterday, pretty nearly expresses their views. The vote for St John will represent only the merest fraction of the prohibition strength of the country It is a mistake, as we view it, on the part of the handful "to stand up to be counted," under the idea that such notation will indicate the strength of the cause or contribute to its advancement On the contrary, it will make a cause which on a proper occasion would be very strong, appear ridiculously weak We say a proper occasion, the term implying that the present time is not well chosen, nor is it, since the election now at hand is a national one, and regulation or suppression of the liquor traffic can be accomplished only through state action As THE OREGONIAN has remarked heretofore, the general government cannot deal with the subject at all Only the states can deal with it. Were St. John elected president, and were a congress chosen in accord with his views, still nothing could be done that way. Congress cannot enact a prohibitory law. Each state has full power over the liquor traffic within its own limits, deriving the authority from the police power with which the states are clothed. Nothing less than an amendment to the constitution of the United States could give congress any power over the subject and such amendment, if enacted, would change the whole relations of the states and of the general government toward each other, because under an amendment that would be effective on this point the states would be deprived of all power over their internal affairs No such amendment of the national constitution could possibly be carried and our prohibition friends who are pressing for national action on the subject are therefore beating the air The cause, if carried at all, must be carried in detail by the states, each acting for itself In fact then the candidacy of St. John is irrelevant to the prohibition question, and we think that nine-tenths of the prohibitionists themselves see it in that light. Otherwise they would mass their vote upon St. John, whereas, in fact, he will not get one-tenth part of it

In our own state there is a strong prohibition sentiment and we think a growing one As yet there has been no concentration of it upon any plan of action It has been talked of hitherto as one of those wide and ideal generalizations of good with which the text books of ethical philosophy abound. In the work-a-day routine of life few take notice of such things and even the liquor traffic itself as long as it is only talked about vaguely as an evil, doesn't think it worth while to defend itself against feeble and harmless attack. Now the liquor traffic throughout the country knows that it is in no danger from the candidacy of St. John It sees at once that it not only cannot be hurt by prohibition pressed as a national issue, but that its position will even be strengthened by such action, since its enemies, through efforts mistakenly directed, will only wear themselves out and consequently the liquor traffic is highly friendly to the St John canvass and its recognized organs even have words of encouragement for it But most of the prohibitionists view the situation in the same light, and for the reason that they do not want to waste their energies in ill directed and abortive efforts, they decline to give their votes to St. John In Oregon prohibition, if presented in a practical way as a state issue—the only practical way—would get a very large vote, one-third certainly of the whole vote of the state and perhaps even a majority but in the irrelevant form of a national issue it will command only a few, a very few, votes, and the cause will be hurt by so meager an exhibit. The liquor traffic will not be afraid of so small a handful of votes the prohibitionists will be disappointed by the apparent weakness of their cause, state action will be delayed, and the liquor rings will be encouraged to keep up their organization and to oppose every species of control

This is an outline of the chief reasons why the prohibitionists of the country do not answer at the St John roll call They see that his candidacy is a mistake of judgment and of method, a misdirection of effort and an injury to their cause When they "stand up to be counted" it will be in a campaign of state action, when a count will count for something, and not be as futile as a whiff of gunpowder blown into the air

MONEY AND BUSINESS

In the English market wheat is dropping lower and lower The general trade of England now is in a most unsatisfactory condition, and the depression which is felt in the United States is shared fully in the United Kingdom and throughout the world All efforts to sustain prices have been abandoned All the great "operators" in New York and elsewhere, including Vanderbilt and Gould, have been forced at last to "let go," and prices of stocks, bonds, real estate agricultural products and all merchandise are left to find their own level The tide of prices is running out as much below average low water mark as it had rolled in above the average high water mark on the flood of two years ago And yet money never was more plentiful in London and New York Simultaneously with the decline of stocks and the collapse of speculation the banks are reported in a plethoric condition. Thus the bank statement of New York for Saturday, Oct. 12, showed a gain in reserve funds, the surplus being increased to the unprecedented amount of $30,000,000 in excess of the average at the like season for several years past and this at the time when the bank reserves are usually drawn upon most heavily for movement of crops and for mercantile transactions The banks simply refuse to lend their funds for the expansion of speculative bubbles Investors have no confidence in the market, and trade, which has been standing on forced prices, loses its artificial props and must come down Wheat, for example, is not so much more abundant than formerly, but there are no speculators in the market The staple is let alone nobody touches it except to fill orders or consumption and the natural pressure to sell when nobody is buying to hold, accounts for the unparalleled depression of the price. Undoubtedly now it is about down to the bottom. There can hardly be a lower depth

It is apparent that there has been overspeculation in all directions Much of it has been attended by positive dishonesty Men who have money will not support the market because they have no confidence in it. The rascality and recklessness that ran the stock market for several years has so destroyed confidence that, with prices at a very low level and money in unexampled abundance, the public cannot be induced to take hold Everything else has been more or less affected or infected by it The craze of speculation ran the prices of all commodities up to excessively high figures Its collapse lets them down to a level correspondingly low There is but one thing to do, and that is to wait patiently for a change through the natural laws of trade

Representatives of the New York Herald telegraphed from Ohio the night before the election "To-night closes the fiercest contest ever known in Ohio politics, and for the first time with the democrats confident of victory, "The democratic leaders are confident almost without exception of carrying the state" The morning after the election the Herald was equal to the emergency It said "The Ohio election has resulted in just about the figures of the democratic national committee They have given it to the republicans by 15,000 ever since their figures were made up several days ago"

The democratic party must stay out at least as long as the Israelites roamed and journeyed in the wilderness. Twenty-four from forty leaves sixteen.

HE BOBS UP SERENELY

On Monday last the prison doors of Pentonville in England were opened for the release of a celebrated character, being no less a personage than Arthur Orton, better known to fame as "the Tichborne claimant." Some thirteen years ago this man arrived in England from Australia and claimed to be Sir Roger Tichborne, the missing son of the wife of Baronet Tichborne He produced people to swear that they had seen the widow Tichborne recognize him as her son, and for a while, was in a fair way of establishing his claim to the estates of the dead baronet But all this time the next-of-kin were not idle they were vigilant active and aggressive They at once despatched an experienced detective to Australia, who took great pains to search into the case and elicited two facts first, that the claimant was generally known as Arthur Orton, under which name he had been brought up during his obscurity second, that he had at one time borne the name of Castro, while working in a butcher's shop in one of the Australian cities.

The claimant secured some of the most eminent counsel in the United Kingdom, among them Dr Charles Kenealy one of the queen's counsel Upon his accepting a retainer in this case Dr Kenealy received his dismissal from his former high station, but went on with the case, which was conducted with such acrimony that he was disbarred shortly after the termination of the trial and died of a broken heart. The truth was that the English aristocracy did not desire any re-inforcements from the sheep pastures and slaughter pens of Australia, that the claimant was not only a big, coarse, and boorish fellow, but he had committed the offence of working for a living and lastly, that there was barely enough property for the next-of-kin, who were people of high repute and important social standing Hence, while we must believe Orton to have been an arrant imposter we must also believe he could not have established his claim even had he actually been the wandering heir to the Tichborne estates.

The case is the greatest of all the modern causes celebres of the English bar, not only from the eminence of counsel engaged on both sides, but also from the great amount of property involved in the claim and the high social standing of witnesses on both sides. The trial cost a fabulous sum of money, and the claimant, in order to gain means to carry on his suit, issued shares in an association of which he was the president, redeemable in cash when he gained his suit. On the failure of his suit he was arrested and tried for the crime of perjury, of which he was duly convicted and sentenced to fourteen years' imprisonment By industry and good behavior he has so reduced the term that he is now at liberty under a monthly ticket-of-leave, having served less than eleven years. By the terms of this ticket-of-leave he is bound to report himself once a month at the police headquarters in Scotland Yard, and for the present he keeps quiet and has nothing to say.

If the English people were of as nervous and excitable mental organization as the French, we should expect to see this man heading a revolution to dethrone the queen, banish the Prince of Wales and all the rest of the royal leeches, and kick the house of lords and its satellite bishops into the sea Among the lower classes of English society, to whom the aristocracy are but as a frog-pond to the ocean, this man has an immense following, who believe that he was the rightful heir and was deprived of his rights by aristocratic influences brought to bear upon the courts The slums and alleys of Holborn are not alone in this belief, nor yet the vice-tainted dens of Shoreditch and Wapping, but you can go outside the stench and smoke-reek of London and find honest people who live in thatched cottages and breathe air as pure as their own humble and honest lives men and women born to work and free from the crime-taint of the city, who will die in the belief that Arthur Orton was foully wronged and that he was the real Sir Roger himself. But the phlegmatic Englishman does not like revolutionary proceedings He believes in leaving the government as he found it and as his forefathers bequeathed it to him, and, hence a thousand Tichbornes could not incite him to mutiny

The claimant may come to America, for he is not without means of some sort and can go abroad if he likes And while we have no faith in his pretensions, yet there may be those of his countrymen who will fortify him for another battle with the courts of his own native land To our notion he might have succeeded had he never borne the name of Castro—that was the great cause of his downfall A man who has wandered off from home or been kidnapped during his childhood, might have one alias without bearing the impress of a criminal life but the possession of a second spurious name, acquired after attaining his majority, seemed like the evidence of a criminal life and was really the great obstacle in his path all through this famous trial Such a man might be deemed a dangerous person in England, but here there are no titles to be coveted and no estates likely to be gobbled up by alleged missing heirs Hence, should Arthur Orton turn up in America, he will not be deemed dangerous. If he behaves himself well he will be protected by our laws and if he swears to lies and endeavors to suborn perjury upon others, he will be sent to jail as he was in England As a claimant to the Tichborne estates through any ordinary process of law, he is not likely to come again to the front and his only way of posing as a martyr to the laws of his own country is by inciting a revolt of the working classes against the aristocracy This sort of proceeding is not likely to occur England is too quiet and conservative a country for that, and if Arthur Orton remains there he will soon sink into obscurity

BAD RECORD

There are republicans whose advice was given against the nomination of Blaine but the question with them now is, not whether they like Blaine or not, but whether they like the democratic party or not They can't support this party with its history of the last thirty years, all of it discreditable and much of it infamous They cannot help asking themselves what would have been the fate of the country if the policy of this party during the last thirty years had prevailed Had this party succeeded in its efforts to defend and perpetuate slavery; had it been allowed to arrest the war for the Union by its success upon the platform which declared the war a failure had it broken in upon the line of republican success when it declared the constitutional amendments revolutionary and void had it succeeded in the purpose it announced in congress to wipe out the last vestige of your war legislation; had it, in short, prevailed at any time and upon any point upon which it has appealed to the country since it was driven in disgrace from power in 1860, who can pretend that the result would have been anything less than hurtful, or even disastrous, to the country? No republican of right mind can vote for such a party Those who detested it for its support of slavery and the rebellion, and who have censured and distrusted it for its misconduct since, would receive with little less than horror a suggestion or invitation to aid in voting it into power.

There never has been in our politics anything analogous to the contest which has been in progress since the issue was made up years ago between the parties as they now stand The reason is that no other party ever had so objectionable and so ignominious a history as the democratic party has made. This is the reason why it has been beaten from year to year and from decade to decade The enlightened judgment the embodied patriotism, the universal conscience of the country, have been justly against it, and are justly against it still In ordinary circumstances there would have been a change of administration long ago That there has not been is due wholly to the unworthiness of the democratic party for which there is no parallel in the history of parties or politics

Note what a confession is made by the New York Times. It was telegraphed yesterday In an appeal to democrats whom it is trying to lead to victory, it says "It is in your hands to prove that the democratic party, so long, so deeply distrusted by the country, is capable of being an effective instrument of honest government." Can the Ethiopian change his skin? It is an insult to intelligence to pretend that a party with a character and history confessedly so bad can be changed at once into an effective instrument of honest government" Besides, if it could be it ought to do penance yet awhile longer, for its record is criminal beyond all power of description Again says the Times, "You have honest republican allies enough to secure the election if you but do your duty. Is this little leaven of the Pharisees, which is only hypocrisy, to leaven so gross a lump? It is satisfactory to observe that in the lucubrations of the Times the doubt is implied as to the ability of this party to win, even with the aid and under the leadership of those who are professing to give it respectability, to relieve it of the load of odium and distrust under which it rests, and to commend it as a possible instrument of honest government Such an appeal from a friend illustrates and emphasizes more than the denunciations of an enemy the admitted badness, the historical depravity of this rejected party

Sir Edmund Currie, a noted London physician has sought to improve the occasion of the panic at a possible visitation of cholera by pointing out that if that plague should come to London with say 25,000 cases and 10 per cent of them fatal the universal terror would be appalling Yet he officially declares that there are now in London annually 25,000 cases of scarlet fever, with more than 2000 deaths. This annual scourge, which, he says, is in some respects worse than cholera, is perfectly within control of sanitary science and could be stamped out if science would properly apply its knowledge of the disease. But as scarlet fever arises from an uncleanly condition, which also invites a scourge of cholera, it seems likely that the latter plague will have its own way when it reaches London and will be abundantly able to beat the record of the scarlet fever

One of the departments of the New York Mail and Express is headed "Men who Want Office" It is necessary to state the fact that this is a republican journal in order to correct the impression given above that it is publishing a democratic poll list.

LOCAL AND GENERAL.

WAR ON SHEEP DESTROYERS.—Mr. S. L. Moore of Lewis county, arrived in Portland yesterday from eastern Oregon. He has been engaged for the past three years in driving bands of sheep from away beyond Baker City to the Palouse, making ten miles per day, which is about as far as sheep can travel while feeding on the way. He states that the prairie wolves or coyotes are very plentiful all over the sheep ranges and have destroyed a large number of sheep this season. In one night they killed twenty-eight from a band belonging to Mr. Wells. Mr. Moore says the coyotes have increased so in the Willamette valley as to almost put an end to sheep raising there. The sheep in eastern Oregon have been away up on the mountains during the summer, and the coyotes being prairie bred, do not care much for going into the woods, but this summer they have visited some of the mountain ranges and killed several hundred sheep for one man. Mr. Moore thinks that the coyotes have killed enough sheep this season to pay all the herders employed. These destructive brutes lay concealed in tall grass or among rocks or brush, and when a band of sheep is allowed to scatter they attack them, and are not satisfied with killing one sheep, but as soon as one has been fatally wounded they fly at another and slay as many as possible. The shepherds do not care to put out poison for fear of killing their valuable dogs, and it is difficult to destroy them, and they increase with great rapidity. The sheep men are in hopes that the government will do something for their relief.

HORSE IN A WELL.—Yesterday morning Poundmaster Henry Wilmer was notified that a horse had fallen into a well about fifteen feet deep near the North Pacific Manufacturing Company's works. It appears that the animal had been turned out to feed on the vacant lots near by with a rope around its neck, and by some means had caught one of its hind feet in the rope and in this hampered condition had fallen into the well, where it had to lay on its back with its head twisted around to one side all night, and in its struggles had bruised its head in a most fearful manner. A boy cut the rope and notified Wilmer, who procured the aid of some men who were working near by, and after considerable labor extricated the unfortunate animal. The horse is a bay with small saddle marks and is shod all round. The owner should attend to it.

SOME NEW PICTURES.—Visitors at the art department of the Mechanics' fair have noticed during the last two days an interesting addition to the exhibit in that department. It consists of a group of eight original designs in black and white, by prominent New York artists, prepared for the engravings in Bancroft's new readers, published in San Francisco. These pictures are about 16 by 20 inches in size, neatly mounted, and are a very attractive feature. They are the only representatives of that style of art in the gallery. Those of our citizens who have visited the annual exhibitions of black and white drawings in New York will recognize these as fine representatives of their school. They have been kindly loaned to the collection by A. L. Bancroft & Co.

WIENER VS. FOO.—The suit of Henry Wiener vs. Quan Wo On and Ah Foo was tried in the state circuit court yesterday, and last evening after a brief deliberation the jury returned a verdict in favor of the plaintiff. Wiener was the assignee of W. Scott Beebe, the attorney, who had a claim of $1000 against the Chinamen for securing to them the lease of the property on the northeast corner of Second and Oak streets. The Chinamen repudiated having employed Beebe, but he had several witnesses in his behalf and proved that the above fee, exorbitant as it may seem, had been promised to him in case he should secure the lease. Consequently the jury gave a verdict in favor of his assignee for the full amount claimed.

MUSIC FOR THE CELEBRATION.—The Montefiore committee received yesterday from Mrs. General W. S. Hancock of Governor's island, N. Y., a manuscript score of the "Morceau d' Occasion," composed by that estimable lady and dedicated to Sir Moses Montefiore. The music is arranged for full orchestra, and will be rendered by an efficient orchestra at the celebration next Sunday evening at New Market theater. The committee are very fortunate indeed to have been favored with this rare production, which is especially valuable from the fact that the written copy comes direct from the composer, and is accompanied by an autograph letter from the distinguished lady.

THE MISSING MAN.—The reward offered for the discovery of T. A. Clarke caused several parties to go out searching yesterday, but all were unsuccessful. The boys who found the boat adrift below the city went down, and searched, and inquired in that vicinity, but could find no trace of the missing man. Other parties will continue the search to-day. Two detectives will bend their energies to solving the mystery connected with this sad affair. If it were Clarke who went off down the river in the boat found adrift, it is likely that he has been drowned, in which case the body will rise to the surface.

WEDDING.—Yesterday afternoon Mr. J. S. Polhemus, government engineer in charge of the jetties at Yaquina bay, was married to Miss Mary C. Daly, only daughter of Mr. W. A. Daly of this city. The ceremony took place at St. David's church, East Portland, Rev. John W. Sellwood, uncle of the bride, officiating. The parents and other relatives of the bride and a large number of friends were present. Immediately after the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Polhemus were driven to the steamship Coos Bay, which sailed at 6 o'clock for Newport, the future home of the happy couple.

THERE WILL BE NO EVIDENCE.—William Kelly, the sailor boarding-house runner, who is charged with assisting seamen to desert, waived examination before Justice Green yesterday and gave bonds for $250 to appear before the grand jury. The principal witness against Kelly is Capt. Willis, whose vessel the sailor left. This is a case where the grand jury should not lose a moment's time. No master is going to detain his ship to prosecute a man, and if the matter takes the usual slow course, the grand jury will have to dismiss the case for want of evidence.

MORE CITIZENS MADE.—The vote of Multnomah county for the coming presidential election is steadily increasing. Four more foreigners were made full citizens of the United States, in the state circuit court yesterday. Their names are Michael Sins, Bernard McCarts, Pierre Ernout and Archibald Beaumont, and no one can doubt for a moment their various nationalities. Their politics cannot be so definitely announced.

BOYS MISSING.—James C. McLaren of Tacoma, W. T., writes to THE OREGONIAN inquiring for two boys, Frank McLaren and Tommy Knapp, each 12 years old. They were en route to Nebraska, and had reached Soda Springs, Idaho, on the 9th inst. when they were induced to return west. Since then nothing has been heard of the boys.

TRAIN DITCHED.—The freight train on the Kalama road, due here at 9 A. M., jumped the track this side of Weidler's mill. The engine, tender and one car were ditched. A construction train had just taken the side track ahead of the freight, and the brakeman left the switch open. This caused the accident.

TUGBOAT SEIZED.—John Barrett has brought an action against the little tugboat Chippewa, which is used as a tender to the floating sawmill near Ross island, and the boat has been taken possession of by the sheriff to secure a claim for labor performed on her when owned by E. E. McClure, to the amount of $87 57.

DECISION TO BE ANNOUNCED.—Judge Seneca Smith will announce this morning in the state circuit court his decision in the case of David P. Groves vs. M. F. Culver, upon the motion of defendant for a new trial.

JURORS WANTED.—A special venire was issued to the sheriff yesterday for eight jurors to serve in the state circuit court during the remainder of the term. The venire is returnable this morning.

CAMPAIGN NOTES.

Prof. W. J. MacMahon will speak at Dayton, Yamhill county, on Friday evening, 24th.

The Hon. J. C. Leasure speaks for the East Portland Blaine and Logan club to-night.

The Hon. W. J. McConnell will speak at McMinnville on Wednesday evening, 29th inst.

Hon. C. W. Fulton of Astoria will speak to the republican club at Eugene City on the evening of Wednesday, the 29th.

The Hon. A. G. Marsh of Vancouver will speak before the republican Irish-American league at Masonic hall on Friday evening, the 31st.

To-night, at the meeting of the First Ward Republican club, Armory hall, there is to be an array of speakers—Col. Drake, Prof. MacMahon, J. C. S. Richardson, L. A. Stephens and Alex Bernstein.

The latest reports from Washington territory are to the effect that Armstrong will be elected delegate over Voorhees by the usual majority. Republicans do not take sufficient stock in the democratic candidate's anti-railroad arguments to desire his election to congress at this particular time.

A FEAST OF GAME

Annual Dinner of the Multnomah Rod and Gun Club—What They Ate and What Was Said at the Table.

The annual dinner of the Multnomah Rod and Gun club was held last evening at the St. George hotel. Members of the club and their invited guests to about the number of fifty sat down to a well spread board which literally groaned under a profusion of game of every variety, cooked in many different styles and calculated to please the palate of an epicure. The utmost jollity and sportsmanlike good fellowship prevailed, and all ceremonious formality being laid aside, every one seemed determined to enjoy himself. The members of the club are, of course, good shots, and their performance last evening demonstrated that they have few superiors as trenchermen. As the different courses were brought on imitations of the calls of the different birds were heard around the table, the shrill whistle of the plover, the quack of the ducks in many variations, the melodious honk of the goose and the trumpet note of the swan, which gave the guests some idea of how these birds were lured within range of the deadly double-barrel. Stories of difficult hunting feats and wonderful shots were heard on all sides.

Following is the bill of fare and it must be said that there was plenty and to spare of each article named, and the man who began at broiled snipe and worked his way conscientiously up to the swan could have honestly asked to be excused from speech-making on the ground that he was "too full for utterance."

At the conclusion of the repast Mr. J. W. Whalley, president of the club, arose and said "I ask you to fill a bumper and drink it with me. It is said that Arthur was one of the greatest knights of the round table. There is another Arthur who among the knights around the table is equally great. He not only knows how to kill the festive canvas back but how to eat it. I propose President Arthur of the United States. Drunk standing.

M. V. Spencer proposed the City Government. He said many present had seen Portland spring from a hamlet to a city of 30,000 inhabitants, and its prosperity was due in a large measure to the wisdom and care of those who had administered its affairs.

R. E. Bybee said he did not know why he had been called upon to respond to this toast unless it was because he was one of the oldest residents. When he came here Portland was not known and Linnton was the great city of the northwest, but Portland had supplanted it. It had been truly said that the prosperity of a city depended upon its officers, who should not be elected upon political issues, but for their capability to manage its affairs. A city is not like a clock. You can't wind it up and let it run itself. As he had never had the pleasure of drawing a salary from the city he would ask to be excused from enlarging upon the subject.

F. J. Jeffery proposed "Our Dogs," the noblest of animals and the truest friend of man.

President Whalley responded. He said that every member of the club probably thought he owned the best dog in the world, and their love for these noble animals could inspire eloquence in all, but sometimes they could also call forth invective. He knew how it was himself. He recalled some of his experiences with his dog 'Jim,' whose peculiarities the company seemed well to know, judging from the roars of laughter with which the account was greeted. He had traveled considerably during the past year and a half and had never in any town in America or Europe seen so many fine dogs as we have here in Portland, especially Irish setters. At a dog show in London he had seen some fine dogs, but not as good as we have here. There were plenty of pointers, but they were only fit for upland and not suitable for our marshes. He paid a compliment to Messrs Lownsdale, Reed and others, who had done so much toward improving the breed of dogs here and hoped that the time was not far distant when the Rod and Gun club should have a kennel of its own.

Mr Nicoll being called upon for a song responded with "We Will a Hunting Go" rendered in his best style.

George Curry proposed "Kindred Clubs," paying a handsome compliment to the Seattle club, and expressed the hope that soon every town in the northwest would have a club of its own.

E. D. McKee followed with a very witty speech, showing that although he only joined the club because Mr Macdonald obliged him to, still he understood considerable about guns and gunning.

Hon. John Gearin spoke of the benefits of sporting to the youth of the city, who were made better men by the exercise received through going hunting.

President Whalley said that among the gentlemen around the board was one who has passed the meridian of life, to whom the club was much indebted, who had filled the office of president with credit, and who had on coming to Portland made his first earnings by shooting, and from these formed the stepping stone to the fortune he had acquired and which he so worthily applies in fostering sportsmanship. He proposed the health of the well-known crack shot and ex-president of the club, Uncle Davy Monnastes. Drank with honors.

Mr Monnastes said he could not find words to express his feelings for the honor done him, but he would, in lieu thereof, sing a song. He accordingly sang "The Bonny Owl," the club joining in the chorus with a will.

Mr Abell in proposing "Our Absent Friends," spoke of the royal way in which the members of the club who visited Seattle had been treated by the club there, and regretted that they were not present.

H. Johnson proposed The Ladies in a neat speech.

George Curry favored the company with "Love in a River," which was well received.

Other toasts and songs followed, and the party broke up at a late hour, having passed a most pleasant and enjoyable evening.

FIRE EXTINGUISHER TEST

A Complete Fire Extinguisher Exhibited on Our Streets—The Harden Hand Grenades a Great Success

A second trial of this wonderful fire extinguisher was fairly tested yesterday afternoon in the presence of a large crowd of spectators, assembled to witness the experiment, which was eminently satisfactory.

The first test was a wooden chimney eighteen feet high and saturated inside with kerosene and coal tar. The match was applied and the fire and black smoke rolled out at the top and roared like a blast furnace. When the fire had burned well into the boards, two of the grenades were broken at the bottom and they generated the fire extinguishing gas that followed the draft that the fire made up the chimney and extinguished every spark almost in an instant.

The second test was made to represent a fire burning in the end of a room. Quite a structure was made, forming three sides of a square ten or twelve feet wide and as high, in which were arranged split pine lumber in a manner to give full sweep to the fire, all of which was well saturated with kerosene and coal tar.

When the torch was applied the flames enveloped the whole structure and the intense heat compelled almost a stampede in the anxious crowd. After getting thoroughly under way, four of the grenades were thrown and the fire dropped dead.

When the smoke had lifted and the spectators could see the work accomplished they were liberal in their applause over the success of the little grenades, and went away well pleased with their entertainment.

The agent stated that the liquid as well as the gas generated from the liquid, was perfectly harmless, and to prove this broke a grenade in his hands, allowing the liquid to spatter over his clothing and in his face.

Some of the advantages this company claim over other extinguishers is that it is so simple in its appliance that people inexperienced with fires can use the grenades successfully while they are excited.

The bottles are sealed up air-tight and there is nothing about them that will get out of order until they are used.

The agency for Oregon and Washington territory has been placed here with R. B. Tuttle.

W. H. Worthington, editor of the Farm and Husbandry, published at Columbus, Miss., writes under date of February 3, 1882: "I find great remedy, Allen's Lung Balsam, I have used in my family for fifteen years for coughs and colds and know it to be the best."

THE MECHANICS' FAIR.

Crowds Attracted by the Agricultural Exhibit—Special Exhibits—Portions of the Exhibit will go to New Orleans—Dis[illegible]—Exhibits Noted

Although comparatively recent in its growth, the agricultural exhibit is eagerly sought out, and creates more interest and attracts more attention from the visitor than does any portion of the pavilion. And well it may this year, for never since Oregon's fertile soil began to produce the cereals, the fruit and the vegetables of which it is capable, has there been a better display made of the successful results which have been obtained. Here in this department of the fair may be found the products of the farm, the mill, the garden, the dairy and the kitchen, and to conceive the arrangement of a better or more complete display is not easy. Visitors from the east, and these are not few, who have seen the exhibits of many other vast agricultural communities assure the people of Oregon that without flattery the one now in the pavilion is the peer of that which can be brought together in any state of the Union. The sheaves of wheat, oats, rye, barley, buckwheat, the bundles of giant corn, samples of native and cultivated grasses, the jars of thresher grain, the pyramids of choicest flour, loaves of the whitest bread, the plates piled high with luscious grapes, rosy cheeked apples, mellow and tempting-looking pears, the products of the bee hive, great round cheeses and golden butter fragrant as the new-mown hay all combine to swell the farmer's heart with pride in his vocation and the city toiler to wish he were so happily situated. That the exhibit will rank foremost in comparison with any that the world can produce is fully believed by those who have it in charge, and every portion of it that is not perishable it has been decided to ship to the New Orleans exposition. Certainly, if Oregon should by any chance fail to take the first prize in this department the display will have been the grandest advertisement of the state and its resources that could have been devised and will most certainly repay the cost of sending it a hundred fold.

Not the least important feature in this splendid display of Oregon's agricultural products is the large and handsome exhibit of the Oregon Milling Company—a pyramid of their "Baker's Extra" brand, prepared by the gradual reduction process, than which there can be no finer, whiter flour manufactured. Two sacks of this pyramid are especially attractive, being of silk and satin cloth respectively, and each having the brand and the lettering neatly painted by hand. Last year one of these pretty satin sacks filled with flour was put on exhibition in the pavilion, and a placard exhibited stating that after the fair it would be sent to Queen Victoria, with the compliments of the company, for her own private use. This year there is a mammoth sack of this same flour, containing 750 pounds, or over three and one-half barrels, and it is reasonable to be supposed that the queen liked her sample so well she has now ordered a sack which shall be commensurate in size as well as quality with her dignity and power. Mr. William Dunbar, commission merchant, of 87 and 89 Front street is the agent for this popular flour of the Oregon Milling company.

Special Exhibits

WILLIAM BECK & SON,

of Nos. 165 and 167 Second street, have one of the most varied and enjoyable exhibitions in the fair. In fact their stand is an exhibition in itself. It is well located for the display of its various attractions—in the center of the west end gallery. It occupies a complete square, having four frontages, each of which is appropriately filled and decorated. On the front, looking toward the west, are two pieces of automaton mechanism, both marvels of skill. One piece is a life-like figure of a magician dressed in Turkish costume, his sage countenance and remarkable beard are in perfect keeping with the character he assumes. In his hands are two cups or dice boxes and as he alternately puts them down and raises them there is a constant change of the articles on the table. First two white balls are seen. These are covered with the cups, and when they are again lifted they have changed into red balls. Next time out of three, and again a pair of dice appear. All the while the figure moves his lips as if speaking, and nods his head gravely, as much as to say, "See how wonderful." The other piece is a piece of sable minstrels surrounding a female dancer. As she dances to the merry music of a fine musical box, concealed inside, the musicians appear to be playing the air on their various instruments, their lips move in concert and the leader beats time, and so life-like are all the figures that it is hard to realize the fact that they are not living Lilliputians. Not only the children are delighted, but also children of larger growth can be nightly seen enjoying the fun with a zest that makes them young again. Beck's exhibit of fine cutlery, guns, pistols, fishing tackle, etc., requires another separate mention.

MAGNIFICENT PIANOS AND ORGANS.

The wholesale house of Gardiner Brothers has this year excelled itself in the elegance of the instruments displayed, and we feel called upon to make special mention of some of their particularly beautiful pianos and organs. Their Steck and their Knabe pianos are two well known to need any special mention, but the attention of every visitor to the fair has been directed to a piano whose equal in beauty has never been seen on this coast. We refer to the Schomacker golden-stringed piano, which was selected and shipped to Gardiner Bros especially for this fair, and is really fit to grace the parlor of a king. Musicians not having an opportunity to visit the fair, can examine this instrument after Monday next at their warerooms, No. 165 First street, where they will be found the other instruments selected for exhibition at the fair. Gardiner Bros certainly deserve great praise for their enterprise in placing so many different and splendid instruments before the public and the patronage they are receiving shows that their honest endeavors to please are appreciated.

NEW SURVEYOR'S LEVEL

W. L. Curtis of Forest Grove exhibits an instrument of his own invention which not only answers all the purposes of a surveyor's theodolite, at one-tenth the cost, but is altogether so simple in its operation that any intelligent boy who has had an ordinary education in arithmetic could be taught in one hour how to become an expert surveyor. It is made of wood and metal, is strong and simple in construction and is altogether free from complication of any kind. With ordinary care it will last a century. It is adapted to leveling and grading at any incline. It is invaluable to farmers for laying off drainage, leveling buildings, etc. It will accurately measure the height of a tree, the breadth of a river or any inaccessible heights. It is so low in price that any one can afford to purchase. Call and see it during the fair or call on or write to the patentee and inventor, W. L. Curtis, Forest Grove, Or.

THE EUREKA PILLOW SHAM HOLDER

This perfect holder is manufactured and sold by Jones Bros., 213 Fourth street. It is a home production, and is the only holder that gives universal satisfaction. It is all metal, solid, one piece frame, will fit any bed, fastens to inside of posts, is kept up by a lock, is firm, never gets out of repair, is bronzed, japanned, or gilt, to suit color of bedstead, has pins to fasten the shams to, no springs, no strings, no wood. Put up one month on trial. Agents wanted.

DOUGLASS, THE TAXIDERMIST,

Offers for sale the elegant glass cases of stuffed birds he exhibits in the fair. Look for them near the entrance on the ground floor and examine them well. The prices range from $10 to $40 per case. They are cheap at the price and would be a beautiful ornament to any parlor. They contain some rare specimens, beautifully preserved and appointed.

CLARK'S CIDER,

The more you drink the better you like it. Don't forget to try it. Made in the agricultural department.

INCENDIARIES AGAIN AT WORK

A Desperate Attempt Last Night to Burn Two Wharves—The Fire Extinguished—Discovered Just in Time to Prevent Big Fire

A quarter past 9 o'clock last evening Mrs. Harris, housekeeper in the National hotel, chanced to look out of her window and saw small tongues of flames darting up in close proximity to a pile of shingles that lay on Kellogg's wharf at the foot of Yamhill street. She alarmed her husband, who is night watchman at the hotel and he, with a presence of mind that comes to few people under such circumstances, ran down to the wharf taking with him two water buckets. There was already considerable of a fire, but by kicking it apart he succeeded in extinguishing it by means of four bucketfuls of water. Having saved the property, Harris then went back to the hotel and telephoned the police of what had happened. Policemen Putnam came up and called Policemen Beyer and Mott whose beats converged at Taylor street. Together the three officers examined the charred nucleus of what might have been a big fire. Close by the door of the warehouse, which of course was kept locked, was a large pile of shingles. Some of these had been split up and piled loosely against the others, forming kindling that would burn almost like tinder. Before this pile of kindling wood several planks were leaned up on end, effectually hiding the fire from the street. Had not Mrs. Harris from her point of observation far above the incipient blaze, discovered it as she did, the whole pile of shingles would have been attacked by the flames before it could have been seen from the street and after that the time consumed before an alarm could have been sent in would have caused a repetition of the late Coloma dock disaster. The policemen carefully examined the premises, but could find nothing that might serve as a clue to the villain or villains who had planned and carried out the arson. Mr. Kellogg employs a man to watch his dock at all hours of the night, but it is said he neglected his duty last evening in order to attend the Mechanics' fair.

The Second Attempt

About 10:30 an attempt was made to set fire to the warehouse at the foot of Madison street, on the south side of the roadway. There is a large pile of cordwood against the warehouse and kindlings had also been piled against this and fired. The blaze was fortunately discovered by Policeman James before it had made much headway, and was immediately extinguished. A man had been noticed by him as loafing around in that vicinity for some time and he and Policeman Smith endeavored to secure him, but he eluded them in the darkness.

There is just one thing for dock owners to do—vigilant watchmen and shotguns.

SCRAPS OF A DESPERADO'S HISTORY

Doings of "Scotty," the Lynched LaCrosse Murderer About Walla Walla

Correspondence Walla Walla Journal.

"Scotty," the man who killed F. A. Burton, president of the Blaine and Logan club at La Crosse, Wis., Oct 16, and who was lynched a few hours afterward, was at one time well known here as a sport and confidence man. He came to Walla Walla in '75 from the Grand Ronde fair, where, by his pleasant address and winning ways, and with the assistance of a tobacco box snap game and several other "sure things," he had made the unsophisticated pay handsomely for the pleasure of his acquaintance. He worked his several devices here very successfully until the police got after him, and then he lived by his wits through the winter. When intoxicated he was reckless. I remember that on one occasion, when a lot of soldiers "jumped" W. P. Horton, and pistols were flashed out all around, "Scotty" drew two, one in each hand, and held a dozen of Horton's assailants in check much to the gratification of W. P. H. He was an expert in the use of firearms, and in the matter of dexterity generally could beat a Japanese juggler. He finally formed a copartnership with a young man here—whose name is well known, but withheld on account of the respectability of his family—and did a wholesale business in stealing horses. At one time, having disposed of twenty-two in Portland, they returned here and painted the town red. On Main street "Scotty" drew a pistol on one of our citizens, and John Justice got out a warrant for the fellow's arrest. (John will remember Joe Scott.) The town getting too warm for Joseph, he crossed the line and wintered at Mrs. Pepper's house, on the Tumalum. He continued to steal horses and drive them out of the country. Among the animals stolen was a fine, large span belonging to Tip Wiseman. When "Scotty" became aware that Tip was after him he skipped. Next heard of him he was traveling between 'Frisco and New York with a bogus jewelry racket and was reported very prosperous. Next he went to Montana, and in a fit of jealousy shot and killed his mistress. For this he served a term in the penitentiary, after having escaped once. This was the penitentiary service mentioned in the dispatch. I saw a letter which he wrote while incarcerated. From Montana he went east, and was for a long time on the river boats. The last I heard from him he was in Wisconsin, and from what the dispatches say and what I know, I am certain that Burton's murderer was the good-looking, pleasant, plausible but dangerous "Scotty" from Walla Walla.

Effect of the Ohio Election.

Chicago News (Dem.)

A very marked impetus has unquestionably been given the republican cause, and if the democrats are to win at all it will only be after a now doubly desperate struggle. Iowa and Illinois, which hung trembling in the balance, are no longer doubtful. They will both give positive republican majorities. In Wisconsin and Michigan the skies are brightening over the head of the Plumed Knight. Altogether, the campaign is again as it was at the opening, dependent upon New York and Indiana, and Blaine's stock is quoted several points higher.

General Beauregard's article on Bull Run in the forthcoming number of the Century frankly discusses the reasons why the confederates did not attack Washington after their victory.

The man who pays no consideration of financial matters takes little or no interest in the subject of overcoats is apparently oblivious to all changes of temperature and as he strides along the thoroughfare displaying his pedestrian accomplishments he regards disdainfully the effete individual who envelops their manly forms in warm top coats. To such robust gentlemen we commend a pea jacket as being less expensive than an overcoat and likely to furnish sufficient protection until they are ready for the heavier garment. To those who are now ready to buy overcoats we offer a tempting display of all grades from the cheapest worth making, to the most grades even the extravagant. LONDON, Oct 21 —Earl Granville has obtained the assent of the German and French governments to the proposals to permit the work of the Congo conference to extend to a complete settlement of the Congo question Further Granville stipulates that this decision shall not be binding, unless the vote of the delegates shall be unanimous

The Lisbon Journal of Commerce says the result of the negotiations of the conference will be the recognition of the sovereignty of Portugal on the lower Congo, under a guarantee of equal trading rights to foreigners and Portuguese

The Frankfort Gazette predicts the failure of the conference, unless English hostility ceases It says the American government has given Germany to understand that it will not sanction the enterprise, if directed against England Portugal sides with England, rather than risk her pretension to possession of the mouth of the Congo Holland, distrusting Germany, is inclined to see in all action against England a strategic movement, of which the final object is the annexation of Holland Italy's colonial interests are opposed to those of the French, and she also supports England

At the meeting called for this purpose at the First Presbyterian church yesterday some thirty ladies and gentlemen met, and after preliminary organization some excellent remarks were made by Dr. Lindsley on the scope and need of work of the kind reaching neglected children, who are under six years of age, and developing their minds and activities in normal happy methods He paid a tribute to Froebel for discovering what may be called the providential plan of educating children through their perceptive faculties and affections, "calling out of their minds and hearts what the Maker put in, instead of over aying with artificial knowledge" After some discussion of ways and means of getting to work, it was moved and carried that a committee of five be appointed by the chair, Mrs Dunlap, for the purpose of preparing a plan of permanent organization, including draft of rules etc This committee was named as follows Mrs B. Goldsmith, Rev F R. Marvin, Mrs G. H Atkinson, Mrs. Richard Hoyt and Rev T. L Eliot. Mrs Dunlap was by motion of the meeting added to the committee A preliminary list of those interested in the work was made, and a meeting ordered for Tuesday next at 3 P M at the same place in order to receive the report of the committee The committee will meet at Mrs Goldsmith's corner of Eighth and Taylor streets, this evening (22d) at 7 30 o'clock.

A Doctor's Fee Reduced from $6,000 to $3,000.

New York Tribune

George D Sickles, the father of Daniel E Sickles, now 84 years old, was suffering from strangulated hernia in February, 1882. On February 19, Dr James H. Spaun performed a "difficult, dangerous and successful" operation, he says, upon Mr Sickles and attended him until April 10, 1882 His bill was $6,000 Mr Sickles refused to pay it. The doctor brought suit to recover the same, and its trial ended yesterday before Judge Larremore, in the court of common pleas. Dr Spaun testified that he was in constant attendance on Mr Sickles for the two months, watching him by night as well as by day He saved his patient's life, and considered $6000 not too large a sum for his services Mr Sickles himself, in apparently a good state of health, testified that he never employed Dr Spaun as a physician, but only as a nurse furthermore, he considered the bill exorbitant Dr Keyes, his physician, had charged only $700 for his services Dr Carnochan, who assisted at the operation, did not vary much in his estimate of the value of the services from that given by Dr Spaun putting the fee at $10 an hour Two other physicians made the estimate at the rate of $5 an hour. The jury, after being out an hour, gave Dr. Spaun $3000, with $225 interest
